Cool Office Gadgets

Having fun in an office environment is crucial to being a productive employee. Sometimes the perfect toy is just what it takes to break the up routine enough to have a bit of fun. ZDNet.com has compiled twenty of the coolest office gadgets and where to buy them.

There is a vast array of toys to choose from.

There are things from tech gadgets such as the Annoy-a-Tron 2.0, an electronic gadget that you place somewhere in the office that intermittently makes annoying noises, to simple toys like the AirZooka & Megazooka, devices that shoot an invisible blast of air at unsuspecting victims.

My top favorites are the 360° Pen, Megazooka, Bucky Balls, Phantom Keystroker V2, and Flipit! USB Charger.

Visit ZDnet.com to see all of these fun gadgets.

Remove Yourself from People Search Websites

People search sites may sound pretty cool until you find out what kind of information is available on the internet about yourself at no cost. With a quick search of your name on any given "peoplefinder" website, you'll see your name, date of birth, names of family members, current and past addresses, your phone number and gender. I've even found my personal signature on real estate documents that were electronically scanned and uploaded to the internet.

Violet Blue, a blogger for ZDNet.com, did some investigating on what it takes to remove your personal information from these peoplesearch websites. It turns out that there is a seemingly endless list of these sites.

The bottom line is that to truly be removed from these sites can be an exhausting task since each site has its own requirements and steps that you must take to be completely removed. Violet's blog has in-depth information, details, and lists companies that specialize in getting you removed from peoplesearch sites.

Visit ZDNet.com for more information.
