

Happy 4th of July!

...from FCR Complete Technology Rentals

It is believed that the first "firecrackers" were actually chunks of green bamboo. The history of fireworks traces back to China during the Han Dynasty around 200 B.C. Gun powder was not yet invented. Someone may have used green bamboo to add to a fire when dry fuel ran out. Bamboo grows so fast that pockets of air and sap get trapped inside. When the bamboo is heated, the trapped air and sap expands and eventually explodes.

There are only 5 states in America that have banned the use of fireworks. Here in Arizona we are part of the unlucky ones that get to miss out on the fun of a simple sparkler. We have such a dry state that it's probably for the best. We do still have the priveledge of watching professional public firework displays.
